

OREGON WINES

Oregon's Oldest Fine Wine Region

Wines of Distinction

The modern era of grape growing in Oregon began in the Umpqua Valley with the first commercial planting of fine wine grapes in 1961. Today, family owned artisan wineries are creating wines of distinctive quality and character that are receiving national and international acclaim.

The complex topography of the Umpqua Valley, formed by the convergence of three mountain ranges of varying ages and structure, contributes to the occurrence of varied soil types and the many sub-valleys. The rich diversity of landscapes, coupled with the area's ideal grape-growing climate creates the conditions needed to produce an exciting array of grape varieties. Currently, with over forty varieties of wine grapes being grown, the Umpqua Valley is now Oregon's most diverse wine growing region.

With its unrivaled natural beauty, this area provides an idyllic destination to "wine your way" along our wine trail, taste our wines and enjoy the warm hospitality of the locals.
