“Legendary Diamonds” tell the fascinating stories of some of history’s most famous diamonds and their equally famous owners. The exhibit blends Scott Sucher’s lapidary art of faceting with the historical figural artistry of George Stuart. Four visual vignettes with accessible QR code audio, trace the most current historical research of the diamonds. Each diamond’s original source is from India, from there the diamonds are sold, traded, looted, recut, and repurposed. Today the diamonds still exist. Maybe the adage is true: diamonds are forever. In the case of these famous diamonds, they have stood the test of time.

The special exhibition “Legendary Diamonds” opens on June 27 and will be on display through January 3, 2016. The vignettes feature 9 famous historical characters from India, to France, Russia and the United States. If you have a group of 8 or more and would like to schedule a personal tour, please call the Museum for reservations.

The Sun King, Louis XIV kept the Tavernier Blue diamond in his cabinet of curiosities until deciding to recut it for his apparel. In 1678, Louis XIV commissioned the court jeweler to recut the Tavernier Blue, resulting in a 67.125-carat stone which royal inventories thereafter listed as the Blue Diamond of the Crown of France. Later English-speaking historians have simply called it the French Blue. The King had the stone set on a cravat-pin.

In 1749, Louis’ descendant, King Louis XV, had the French Blue set into a more elaborate jewelled pendant for the Order of the Golden Fleece. The assembled piece included a red spinel of 107 carats shaped as a dragon breathing “covetous flames”, as well as 83 red-painted diamonds and 112 yellow-painted diamonds to suggest a fleece shape. The piece fell into disuse after the death of Louis XV. The diamond became the property of his grandson King Louis XVI.

The Shah Jahan holds the turban ornament containing the Great Table Cut diamond. Taken as plunder by an Iranian Mogul, the diamond disappeared, although there is some evidence it still exists.

George Stuart

The Historical Figures are the result of artist George Stuart's life-long dedication to the creation of three-dimensional and one-quarter life size portraits of historic personalities. In 1952, he created his first two Historical Figures: the French royal couple Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette. Over the decades George Stuart elevated his skill to the pinnacle of perfection. To date, he has sculpted over four hundred Historical Figures. They are renowned for their realism, exquisite detail and historical accuracy.

The Museum of Ventura County accepted Stuart's donation of almost 200 Historical Figures in 1979. The Museum's Smith Gallery was built and dedicated to the George Stuart Historical Figures® Collection in 1982. The artist currently owns about 140 additional Figures. They are a promised gift to the Museum. Around 60 of his Historical Figures are in private collections nationwide. To this day, George Stuart creates new Historical Figures. His most recent accomplishments are Shah Jahan and Evalyn Walsh McLean. Much of his time, however, is dedicated to the maintenance and constant improvement of existing Figures because George Stuart is a relentless perfectionist!

Ariane Karakalos

Curator and exhibit manager at the Museum of Ventura County in California, Ariane Karakalos was born and raised in a small town near Kassel, Germany. She attended the University of Leipzig and graduated with a M.A. in Cultural Studies and American Studies. She has worked for the Museum of Ventura County for 8 years. Each year Ms. Karakalos curates two exhibitions inspired by the Museum's extensive collection of George Stuart Historical Figures®.

On Saturday, June 27 at 2:00 p.m. Ms. Karakalos will present a lecture on the "Legendary Diamonds" exhibit. Learn more about how the exhibit was put together, the tantalizing stories of the famous diamonds replicated in this exhibit and the artistry of George Stuart. Reservations are Recommended.

Scott Sucher

Over the last twenty years, Scott Sucher has become known as the world's foremost expert on the technology of documenting and replicating famous historical diamonds. His superb private collection of diamond replicas have been displayed worldwide and are described in detail on his website: museumdiamonds.com. He has appeared on the Discovery Channel and National Geographic Channel, and collaborated with museums on various historic diamond research projects. Mr. Sucher will present two lectures at the Lizzadro Museum in November relating to this Special Exhibit including: The Golden Fleece of Louis XV and The Evolution of Diamond Cutting. Please look for dates and times in our Fall Newsletter.
